INVESTMENT COMMENTARY – June 2021

About the Fund

The Guinness Global Equity Income Fund is designed to provide investors with global exposure to dividend-paying companies.

The Fund is managed for income and capital growth and invests in profitable companies that have generated persistently high return on capital over the last decade, and that are well placed to pay a sustainable dividend into the future.

Summary performance

In May, the Fund was up 0.48% (in GBP), versus the MSCI World Index benchmark, down -1.20%. The Fund therefore outperformed the Index by 1.68% over the month.

The recent market rotation into cyclicals and value stocks – as part of the “reopening trade” – meant that Energy and Banks were the best performing industries in May. Whilst the Fund has no holdings in these industries, any drag on performance was more than offset by the Fund’s exposure to the Consumer Staples sector – which also fared well in May – and good stock selection within the IT and Consumer Discretionary sectors. These sectors were the worst performers in May and dragged on the performance of major global indices over the month.

Year-to-date, the Fund is up 7.50% (in GBP), versus the MSCI World Index benchmark, up 7.11%. The Fund has therefore outperformed the Index by 0.39%.

Longer-term, it is pleasing to see that the Fund has outperformed the IA Global Equity Income sector over 3-years, 5-years, 10-years and over the period since launch. The Fund also continues to rank as the top performer verses its peers over the period.

Summary: Dividend

So far, in 2021, we have had dividend updates from 30 of our 35 holdings:

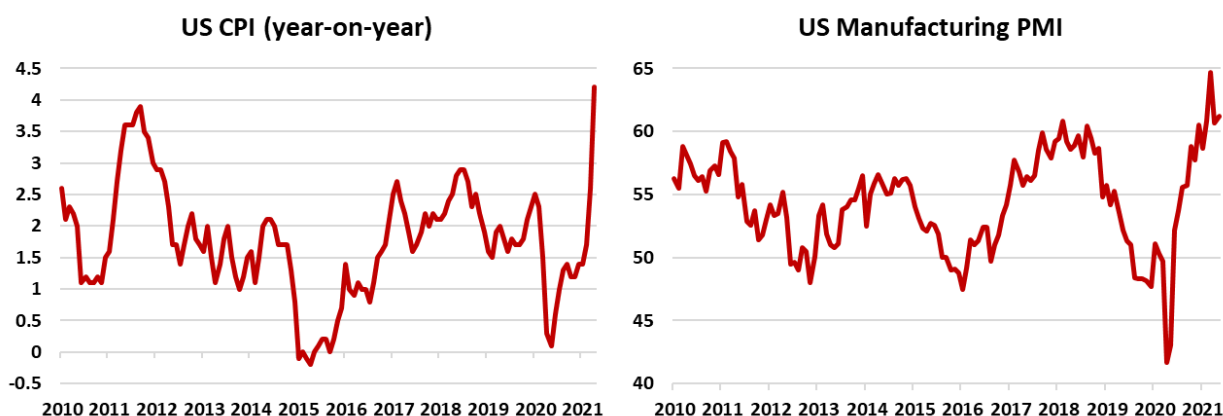

- 26 companies announced increases for their 2021 dividend vs 2020.
- 3 companies have announced a flat dividend vs 2020.
- 1 company has announced a modest cut to its dividend vs 2020.
- 0 companies have announced dividend cancellations.

We await the dividend announcements of the 5 remaining companies: Broadcom, Illinois Tool Works, Microsoft, Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Company, and VF Corp.

May in Review

Global equity markets see-sawed in May as investors fought a double-edged sword. On one side, the ongoing vaccine rollouts are allowing many economies to gradually reopen, and combined with sizeable fiscal stimuluses, there is significant support for a large bounce in economic activity. However, with this comes concerns that the economy could overheat; positive economic data surprises may result in more persistent inflation, which could jolt central banks to tighten monetary policies and curb economic growth.

US data releases in May showed support for both economic expansion and inflation:

Source: Bureau of Labor Statistics, ISM, Bloomberg, as of 31st May 2021

The US Purchasing Managers' Indices (PMIs) for manufacturing and services both beat expectations, as they rose to their highest levels on record. The details of the PMIs not only showed that consumer demand remains buoyant but also that businesses are facing rising input costs, caused by pandemic-induced supply bottlenecks. Headline inflation rose to 4.2% year-on-year for April – the highest level since September 2008. A rise in inflation was expected given the fall in prices this time last year, but even month-on-month inflation rose 0.8%, well above consensus expectations.

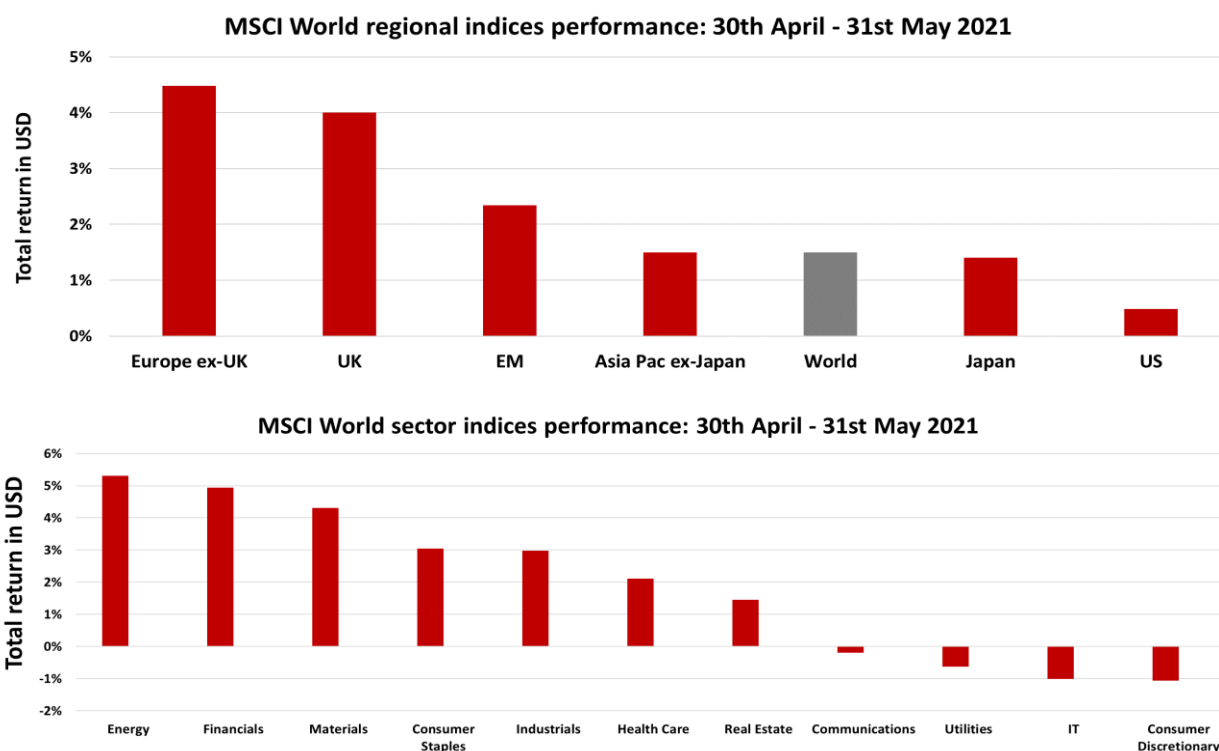

The concerns weighed on equity markets particularly at the start of May, though markets rebounded in the second half of the month to close in positive territory (MSCI World Index +1.44% in USD), with all regions registering gains. The turning point in the month came with the release of the Federal Open Market Committee's April minutes, which signalled a shift in language from the March minutes, stating that "if the economy continued to make rapid progress toward the committee's goals, it might be appropriate at some point in upcoming meetings to begin discussing a plan for adjusting the pace of asset purchases". reassured investors, and eased some worries, that the Fed will not be “taking away the punch bowl just as the party gets going” – a metaphor famously used by ex-Fed chair, William McChesney Martin, in 1955, to describe the role of the Fed.

Aided by reopening economies and strong PMI readings, European stock markets were strongest in May. They benefitted from increased rotation to cyclical and value stocks as vaccine rollout struggles were largely left behind. Emerging and Asian markets benefitted from the weaker US Dollar and continued commodities strength over May, whilst the US was the worst performing region as its tech-heavy exposure dragged returns lower.

Value stocks outperformed their growth counterparts as Energy, Financials and Materials lead the other sectors after posting impressive earnings results. Given the Fund has no exposure to companies within the Energy and Materials sectors, and no Banks, this dragged on the Fund’s relative performance.

Nonetheless the Fund’s overall outperformance versus the benchmark index in the month can be attributed to exposure to Consumer Staples – which performed relatively well in May – and good stock selection within the IT and Consumer Discretionary sectors.

We are confident that all the companies we own in the Fund have persistently high profitability, low leverage, trade at reasonable valuations, and have good potential for dividend growth. With this in mind, we believe there are several reasons why the Fund protects against potentially higher inflation and higher interest rates:

- We seek companies that have persistently generated a return on capital greater than cost of capital. Companies that have achieved this feat tend to have done so due to their competitive advantages – or moats – that often allow them pricing power (which insulates them from inflation) since higher input costs can be passed on to consumers.

Past performance should not be taken as an indicator of future performance. The value of investments and any income arising from them can fall as well as rise as a result of market and currency fluctuations.

- We seek companies which have low leverage. These companies tend to be cash generative and do not need to excessively borrow to fund their operations or fuel their growth (or return capital to shareholders). Highly leveraged companies are at risk of having to make higher interest payments should interest rates rise. Refinancing debt would also be at comparatively unfavourable terms, and this has opportunity costs for the use of the company's capital.
- We seek companies capable of sustainably growing their dividend. Although we are an income fund, we look only for companies capable of growing their dividend over time, which gives some protection from inflation on a relative basis to fixed or slowly growing income generating assets. It is also worth noting, as we discussed in previous updates, that over the long term, dividend growth tends to match or better long term inflation meaning these income streams generally continue to grow in real terms. We seek companies trading at reasonable valuations. Higher interest rates – and the associated higher discount rates – reduce the present value of future cashflows. This tends to disproportionately affect growth companies which typically trade on lofty valuations is given their higher expected future growth.

Portfolio Holdings

ANTA Sports Products was the best performer in the Fund in May (+14.0% in USD).

The leading Chinese sportswear brand has ~15% domestic market and generates revenue through the manufacture of sporting goods, including footwear, apparel, and accessories. ANTA is poised for greater market share in China as it seeks to woo affluent shoppers with pricier athletic gear and expands on the 15% of sales generated from online channels. This includes their namesake products under the ANTA brand and other popular brands such as Fila and Descente, as well as Salomon and Arc'teryx – both owned by Amer Sports, who ANTA acquired in 2019.

The business benefits from a number of structural growth themes including the rise of disposable incomes, especially for Chinese consumers in tier 2 cities, as well as Government initiatives such as the “Healthy China 2030” plan and the new 3-child policy (which was revised from 2-children in May 2021). This gives ANTA's multi-brand portfolio a high revenue growth runway, which combined with peer-leading margins (due to high pricing power and strong operational management), makes ANTA an attractive investment.

VF Corp was the worst performer in May (-9.1% in USD). The global clothing manufacturer, whose line-up of high-profile brands includes Vans, The North Face, Timberland and Dickies, reported fiscal 2021 results that missed expectations, citing store closures and lower consumer demand over the past year as reasons. Whilst the fourth fiscal quarter saw revenue growth of 23%, helped by the acquisition of the Supreme brand, e-commerce growth and strong APAC growth, full year revenue decreased 12%. Earnings for the 4th quarter increased 170% year-on-year, though fell 51% year-on-year for the full year highlighting the challenging landscape the company has navigated over the last year.

Looking forward, VF Corp, which is a dividend aristocrat with 49 years of consecutive years of dividend growth, once again announced growth in its dividend and also lifted full-year 2022 guidance. The company expects 28% revenue growth and 134% earnings growth in the next year, with growth from all regions and particular strength in the direct-to-consumer sales channel.
